- Statistics of the issues.

EXAMPLE:

Evidence selected from this Source 1.....

Results from the recent referendum in South Sudan show that over 98 percent of the people voted for secession. The region is now destined for independence on July 9, 2011. This may bring some hope to a place, which has lost over 2 million people and where over 4 million have been displaced during the civil wars of the past two decades. However, independence brings some serious challenges that need to be addressed. The challenges that lie ahead for South Sudan include; reducing poverty, illiteracy and infrastructure bottlenecks and improving the lack of unity, security and governance.
